When you should raise a concern with us

Our job is to make sure that doctors on the medical register are fit to practise. We don't investigate doctors for making mistakes unless we think these mistakes are part of a pattern of unsafe behaviour.

We can't:

- explain treatment to you
- make a doctor give you a different treatment
- fine a doctor or make a doctor apologise
- intervene in disputes over fees or medical records.

If you want to complain about your treatment or the standard of service you've received, you should first take this up with the organisation who provided treatment. If you're not satisfied with the response of the organisation, you should follow national complaints procedures.

If you think a doctor has behaved in a way that means they pose a risk to patient safety, you should raise your concern with us.

These concerns could include:

- violence, sexual assault or indecency
- a serious criminal offence
- abuse of professional position (eg an improper sexual relationship with a patient)
- discrimination against patients, colleagues and others

- a standard of treatment that suggests the doctor may be a risk to patient safety.

I have read and understood this and wish to raise my concern with the GMC. *

Dear Mr Mobey,

I have been sent an appointment letter with a local state psychiatrist for July 5th at 10.30 am which a locum Community Psychiatric Nurse has refused to cancel. The result is that in a few days time when I fail to turn up to the unwanted appointment I will appear to be behaving as a non compliant citizen who wastes publicly funded health services time. I really, really, really, do not want to be forced to talk with a psychiatrist here. They are the force behind me losing 4k a year of critical funding from my trust to continue funding a 125mn domain name holding business opportunity in fact. I will be forced to let the 125mn value of domain names lapse meaning the businessmen here can register the domain names themselves. The businessmen are in league with the state psychiatrist and locum CPN. I am also next week going to have the entire contents of my small flat removed under the management of the CPN who has been given the role of my care co-ordinator by the state psychiatric department here. I have no complaint against any of my GPs here or ever have had or are ever likely to have. It seems the local psychiatric service has gone totally power drunk. In a few days time my flat will be stripped of 100% of its entire contents. They have had me working 247 for them for the last 5 weeks solid now. I am a simple MASCE MASME MIEEE MIET MBCS ACIARB Engineer who now is learning blockchain computer programming solidity and EVM technology who likes to play and sing guitar in pubs once or twice a month for extra money.

I intend to print this letter off and mail it to you in Manchester, and email it to you, and submit it to your online form facility.

The CPN is called Ronnie Mubwiliza and the Psychiatrist is called Dr Yasmeeen Kurian.

Sincerely
